FOUND ASPHYXIATED
FROM MONOXIDE GAS
IN HIS GARAGE

Late last Saturday night William J. Yost was found dead in the garage at his home, 3668 Tennyson street, having been asphyxiated by gas from the exhaust pipe of his automobile.

It is stated that Mr. Yost was to have driven to town early in the evening to meet his wife. On his failure to do so, she drove home with her father and found his body lying beside the rear wheel of the car in the garage. Only one small garage door was open. A pulmotor squad from the police station was called out, but all efforts to revive the unfortunate man proved futile.

Mr. Yost was a native of New Jersey and was thirty-six years, three months and twenty-one days of age. Private funeral services were held last Wednesday morning.

Circus At M. B. Rink

MANAGER "ED" KICKHAM
FIXES "BIG TOP" FEATURES
FOR NEXT FRIDAY

"It'll be as peppy as any three-ring show you ever saw," says the jovial "Ed" Kickham in describing the circus that's coming next Friday night, August 7, at his new Mission Beach Roller Rink. "There'll be something doing every minute," he states, "from the time of the grand entrance until the great wind-up of a big balloon shower of all sorts of birds and animals." And, what's more to be remembered, everybody gets a gift.

It may be a ring-tailed monkey or a howling hyena, and then, again, it may be a bird of paradise or bright-colored parrot, but you stand an even chance of becoming the possessor of a present from Kickham's Noah's Ark collection. And there'll be regular circus stunts, too. "So don't miss going to the M. B. rink next Friday night."

Mrs. Todd has a wide circle of acquaintances in the beach district and much success is predicted for the new enterprise.

HENRY EULBERG TALKS ABOUT STORAGE BATTERIES
AND THEIR STRENGTH

Prospective buyers of storage batteries often have a hard time deciding between several types of battery all suitable for their purpose. This is true, no matter what make of battery they choose to buy.

"It is to the advantage of the user to have an oversize battery," says Henry Eulberg of the Ocean Beach Garage on Newport avenue. "Emergencies arise and the car equipped with an oversize battery is better prepared to meet them than the car with an under capacity battery."

"This is so obvious that it is seldom questioned and the slight additional cost for the bigger battery is more than covered by the additional life it contains. One horse pulling a two-horse load will not last long," says Henry. "Two horses on the same load will grow fat on the job and always have the reserve strength to meet emergencies. The same is true of batteries."

TWO HOME RUNS
START TRIUMPHANT GAME
FOR OCEAN BEACH

If you missed last Sunday's game on the local diamond, you were out of luck in the line of thrills. The O. B. boys walloped the Edgemore team by a score of 8 to 3. And the fireworks began with a pair of home runs in the first inning for the beachites. Catcher Pells was in fine form and with one man on the bags he drove a skyscraper 'way over the houses in outer center field, bringing in the runner and scoring a Babe Ruth for himself, while the ball went sailing toward the broad, blue Pacific. It got the crowd right up on their toes. And then Jack Lutter kept 'em there by slamming out another homer down toward the Ocean Beach lumber yard territory. The visiting team gathered goose-eggs well along in the game, until Nascene Mayloof, a conscientious and enthusiastic beach substitute (loaned to the visitors), made the circuit and scored their first tally. He also later made the straightest and cleanest hit of the game, which helped to add two more runs to their total score of three. Mayloof most deservedly shared the honors of the day with the home bunch. Marvin James had excellent control and held the farmers down to six hits.

The score:
Ocean Beach ..... R. H. E.
Edgemore ..... 8 9 3
Batters—James and Pells; Estrado and Woods.

Newspaper Disparagement FALSE AND MISLEADING STATEMENTS PUBLISHED ABOUT OCEAN BEACH

Considerable caustic comment by San Diego "Sun" at the time of the Walsh arson trial:

GIN BRINGS FINE

"Harry Brown, a negro, was found guilty of having gin in his possession, and was fined $50 in police court today. Brown was arrested at a negro dance hall in Ocean Beach by Detective Sgt. Chadwick."

The last sentence in that story is absolutely untrue and shamefully misrepresents Ocean Beach.

For the enlightenment of the editorial and reportorial staff of the "Sun," it is well to record that there is NO negro dance hall in Ocean Beach, and a like negative applies to the business and residential population.

Detective Sergeant Chadwick, who resides at 2120 Washington street, Ocean Beach, has informed "The Beach News" that he arrested Brown about a month ago at a resort near Pacific Beach, and NOT at "a negro dance hall in Ocean Beach."

And here's another extract from a front page story published in the San Diego "Sun" at the time of the Walsh arson trial:

"The case went to the jury this afternoon after three days of testimony which drew large crowds of white and negro Ocean Beach residents."

And the story wound up thusly:

"A series of disturbances arising from negroes moving into Ocean Beach residence districts."

It is a known fact that among an estimated crowd of two hundred in attendance at the trial on the day mentioned, only five negroes were present and two of the number were the plaintiffs in the case.

However, you pay your money and take your choice in the dissemination of news.

When the editor of this paper was a reporter on the New York "Sun," during the chieftainship of the illustrious Charles A. Dana, the striking slogan was coined and displayed: "If you see it in 'The Sun,' it's so."

Judging from present and past performances in regard to Ocean Beach events published by the San Diego "Sun," that luminary could very consistently paraphrase and more fittingly adopt the motto:

"If you see it in 'The Sun,' it's NOT so!"

San Diego in 1851 had a newspaper, the San Diego Herald, edited by a New Englander, J. Judson Ames—one of the many gigantic, blue-eyed sons of enterprise who forced upon the town's Spanish-Mexican sleepiness the din of modern money-making. Ames himself, however, was perfectly unaware of the long-enduring noises he and his little news-scatterer set up.

The old San Diego that Ames envisioned contained a few hundred remnants of the long-lived original Spanish settlers and their numerous offspring, of the tenacious Mexicans who were conquering newcomers in 1825, of the Yankee traders who like Abel Stearns had come to barter and had remained to dominate the commercial and political interests of the place, and we cannot try to guess how many of those overland trappers, immigrants of all sorts, of those Mexican outcasts, of those hide-drooping leftovers of half a dozen Oriental ports.

But the flavor of that old San Diego was then, as it is even now, Spanish. You must agree that the flavor of Old Town is today as Spanish as tamales; as Spanish as El Son that has not been danced there for fifty years. Tommy Getz smiling at the door of the Estudillo mansion, "Ramona's Marriage Place," needs but a felt hat a la panocha, a red sash, velvet pantalons and jingling spurs to bring the completest illusion of the typical Spanish host, dispenser of wide hospitality.

Editor Ames, like the rest of Old Town, spoke Spanish. Many of the advertisements in the old Herald were printed in Spanish. The tax lists named mainly Spanish and Mexican owners. It was glad news therefore to many Spanish people to read on Thursday, May 29th, 1851, the following notice:

"The officers of the U. S. coast survey are now actively engaged in the survey of this harbor, preparatory to the selection of a site for the government lighthouse at this point."

"The gentlemen engaged on this duty deserve great credit for their energy and ability with which they have pushed forward this important work. We understand that the survey will be completed in about one month and we hope that the result of their labors will soon be made public. The following gentlemen are connected with the survey:

"R. D. Cutts, Esq., chief of the triangulating party; George Davidson, Esq., chief astronomer; John Rockwell, assistant; A. H. Harrison, chief topographer; James S. Lawson, assistant."

There is the very beginning of the "Spanish" lighthouse. No Spanish, observe, about these names: Cutts, Davidson, Rockwell and Lawson, the surveyors.

I find no further reference to the Point Loma light until the issue of the Herald published on April 15, 1854. Three years later! Things moved slowly in days gone by. This is the second notice:

"The lighthouse now in the course of erection on Point Loma will when completed make the eighth and last to be erected on the coast of California and Oregon. These buildings were contracted for in Washington by Messrs. Gibbon and Kelley of this city. W. J. Timanus, Esq., who ably represents those gentlemen, has furnished us with the following dimensions of the building, which will be of sandstone and bricks, the former to be found in abundance on Ballast Point and on Point Loma, the latter with cement, lime and lumber are now being landed on Ballast Point by the schooner Vaquero."

Here at last we come upon a Spanish name in connection with the "Spanish" lighthouse! Gibbon, Kelley and Timanus (it should be McManus, but the Spanish orthographers of the day could not manage that Mc!) yield the expected Celtic touch to this job of building; and the only thing Spanish about this information is that boat's name "Vaquero."

ALL SPOKE A DIFFERENT LANGUAGE

By ALFRED E. BENNETT

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

THE trans-Pacific mail liner Mongolia lay for two days in mid-ocean, helpless, from an accident in her fire rooms, and then proceeded on her way. The following are fragments of an exhaustive and carefully written account of the accident in the ship's log:

"At 11 o'clock, post meridian, July 20, 19—; Longitude 136 degrees 32 minutes W.; latitude 3 degrees N., a quantity of escaping oil in the forward fire-room caught fire. When the firemen rushed on deck some one gave the fire alarm. In spite of the efforts of officers and crew a panic ensued among the passengers. Second cutter was cast adrift, presumably by two steerage passengers that are missing. Hon. James Wellden, Barrister, London, first cabin, missing. . . . Supposed to have fallen overboard during the excitement."

When morning broke on the drifting cutter her occupants studied each other curiously. The English jurist remembered the giant Slav and the big, coarse Italian. He had seen them often among the other steerage passengers around the break of the fore-castle when he took his daily promenade. The Slav and the Italian turned to each other, knowingly. This was the little man with the side-whiskers that had nodded approvingly when the mate kicked and swore at a steerage passenger for failing to observe the sign:

"STEERAGE PASSENGERS NOT ALLOWED ABOARD THIS NOTICE."

And it was quite natural that this superior person should even now be in the after part of the boat while they found themselves forward. There was no attempt at conversation. By the frightened cries that had followed their separation from the liner the men learned that they all spoke a different language. The sea was smooth as glass, and there was nothing to be seen but the eternal sun and the sky's colorless ring.

It was about the middle of the forenoon when the Slav licked his dry lips, swallowed hard several times, and leaned toward the water-beaker and box of sea-stores that lay in the bottom of the boat. But the Italian moved at the same time and the two men looked at each other. From the big, watery, pale-blue eyes, and the dull, ox-like orbs there flashed a light that might blaze between a determined hyena and a stubborn jackal over the body of a lamb, or a lone watering place in the desert. Then they turned to the white-haired jurist, who sat strangely still.

The men were hungry and thirsty. The aged Englishman was even faint. And food and drink—there were the boat-box and water-beaker that are kept in all the boats of an ocean-going vessel.

Again the two men forward gazed long at the precious provisions and then at the old man.

"He did not pull an oar; he is useless." With this thought they both moved; their shoulders touched, and they thrilled at the contact—the knowledge of comradeship. Here was unity of purpose. They were brothers.

Not a quiver of this sinister pantomime had escaped the Englishman. He felt a great wave of self-pity. He realized that he had been condemned by the highest tribunal—a majority of the people—and that there was no appeal. His vote was the minority.

Grasping at a last straw, his judicial mind thought of mixing religion with politics—it had been done to advantage—so keeping his eyes steadily on the now on-coming Italian, he made the sign of the cross on his forehead and breast. But the blackbrowed man did not pause. He climbed over the last thwart. There would be plenty of time for the cross. It would serve when the water and food were gone.

Slowly edging back until he crouched upon the gunwale by the idly swinging tiller, the condemned man watched his executioners advance. Bending low, shoulders together, hands claw-like, the twin beasts crept relentlessly on.

When they put their feet together on the coxswain's seat, the man on the gunwale lifted his face once to permitting heaven, and then, with the calmness and deliberation of one getting into bed, let himself over the stern into the sea.

Straightening up, the Italian drew back the corners of his long mouth, showing two rows of ivory, sharp, sharp as a dog's and white as milk. The Slav answered his brother by lifting a thick lip from dirty, irregular teeth, after the manner of a caged jaguar that places his paw on a hunk of bloody meat. Neither man could wipe away the smile. The Italian's face stiffened like a ghastly mask and the Slav, try as he might, could not bring the upper lip back over his teeth.

They sank down on the after-thwart, back to back, and sat long in deadly silence. Suddenly, the same thought came to both. Whirling, lightning-like, they recoiled for an instant at the ghastly grins, and flew at each other's throats.

Long into the night they fought. Perfectly matched, neither could gain an advantage, and rolling in the bottom of the boat they struggled with all the desperation of strong animals looking death in the face. There were no pleas for mercy or a truce; no word, curse or cry was uttered. Once they got throat grips and choked each other into insensibility, but they opened their eyes together and fought again. Utterly exhausted, they lay at times with their arms twined like affectionate brothers. The fearful struggle continued throughout the night and both men were half dead from hunger and exertion. Tortured with a terrible thirst, they lay with their heads against the water-beaker and listened to the gurgle of the precious fluid as the boat rocked with their efforts.

At daylight, the Slav sought to touch the cork, suggestively, hoping that the Italian would understand to declare a truce until they might both drink, but the other, catching the Slav off his guard, seized the hand and buried his teeth in the wrist. That settled the water problem. Both knew that they could not drink together, and further, that whichever drank first would have the other at his mercy. So they renewed their struggles, and the water sloshed merrily in the beaker.

On the fourth day the Italian turned to the cross. He tried to whisper an ave, but not a sound could he wring from his swollen throat. Then, with his last ounce of strength, he raised his arm to make a sign of the cross. But the Slav, through his fast-glazing eyes, saw the opening, and seizing the hand, bit it savagely.

A few hours later the Italian died, and the soul of the Slav sank down with the other.

The big liner Empress sighted the Mongolia's derelict cutter a week after the accident. She had the story by wireless and her officers knew the drifting boat at once. When the mate and his boat's crew boarded the lonely craft, they looked first at the water-beaker. It was full. Tearing open the provision box they found it to be intact. Then, a startled cry from a seaman drew all hands to the stern-sheets. The trunk of a man whose hands had fastened in a death grip on the rudder-cords floated behind. Sharks had eaten away the legs. Lifting the body on board, they found under the garment an emergency belt holding concentrated food and a gallon of fresh water.

The captain was waiting when the mate returned to the Empress. Touching his cap, the officer made his report in the voice of the men who are never surprised:

"Three men dead, sir, with enough food and water to have lasted them a month."

Rubbish Not Always What It Would Seem

"No fewer than 11 beds have been endowed by the Ancient Order of Druids entirely out of the proceeds of the waste tinfoil thrown away from discarded cigarette and chocolate packets. In other words a sum of £3,000 has been realized on the sale of the waste," writes Byron Bellingham in the Cardiff (Wales) Times of a recent issue. Continuing, he says:

"This is but another illustration of the hidden treasure which lies in the average dust heap. The public have little knowledge of the extent to which rubbish is gold."

"Two large convalescent homes for poor persons suffering from pulmonary complaints are entirely maintained by the sale of used English postage stamps."

"A waste trade dealer who specialized in buying waste from London and country lawyers died some time ago leaving £15,000. He had started life with his own barrow as a poor rag and bone collector, and continued until a chance customer who happened to be a clerk in a solicitor's office gave him a hint of the opening there was for a man who would deal in legal rubbish."

"The rubbish from the cotton mills of Lancashire is not to be despised. A little while ago one of the leaders of the business died, leaving nearly £20,000."

Ancient Calendar

The name "Julian calendar" is given to the reformed Roman calendar worked out in 46 B. C. by Julius Caesar assisted by Sosigenes, the Alexandrian astronomer. It was an adoption of the Greek mode of reckoning, and made the year consist of 365 days and six hours, with an extra day every fourth year. The Julian calendar remained in use among the nations of Europe until the close of the sixteenth century, after which it was gradually supplanted by the Gregorian calendar.—Exchange.

Government Documents

Government bulletins are not copyrighted and may therefore be reproduced at will. It is not safe to take liberties with them, however, that might lead to misrepresentation. If a dealer reproduced a seed bulletin, for instance, and inserted his own advertisement in such a way as to give the impression that the government endorsed him, he would be violating the law.

Thoughtful

A man was on his knees asking a girl to be his wife. "No, I can't marry you," said the girl, "because I don't love you. I'm a tattletale, I have an ungovernable temper, and I despise all kinds of housework." "Well, then," said the man, "I trust you will not object, now that I am in the attitude of supplication, to my offering up a prayer for the man you will marry."

PRISONER HAS NOT SPOKEN IN SEVEN YEARS

Lisbon Puzzled Over Man Who Holds Tongue and Refuses Freedom.

Lisbon.—Seven years without having uttered a single word, despite possession of his faculties, coupled with a determination to live in jail in preference to a life of freedom, have made Ivan Gluchosa known to everyone in Lisbon. He is a mystery to the police, who have on more than one occasion shown him the prison doors, and the people seemingly never tire of speculating why the voluntarily "silent prisoner" never says a word.

A policeman picked Ivan up one summer night in 1918, asleep on a park bench, and ran him in.

consul, but not a word would he say. The perplexed consul sent him back to the prison, where he remained for three years quietly, peacefully and contentedly, but absolutely silent.

Doctors have pronounced Ivan normal in every way, and established the fact that he enjoys listening to the singing of birds.

Insults Fail to Stir Him.

He has been insulted and abused in his own language and in most others, but he never showed he heard what was said.

Traps have been set for him, but all is of no avail. Ivan has determined not to speak.

At the end of three years the prison authorities gave this silent man a new outfit of clothes and a pocketful of money and set him free. But at the gate he shrank back and refused to leave the sheltering walls.

Four years have passed since then. Today Ivan is assistant prison cook, but he will accept no money for his work. Occasionally he goes out on business connected with the kitchen, but from these excursions he returns with manifestations of joy. He loves his job, he loves his prison home, and he finds joy in self-imposed silence.

French Law Case Dates Back to Charlemagne

Paris.—A law suit originating in the days of Charlemagne is being tried by the tribune of the little republic of Andorra, now sitting at Perpignan, France. Charlemagne, returning from his Spanish expedition in 790 A. D., left as a rear guard protection against an incursion from the Moors into France, 1,000 soldiers on the south slope of the Pyrenees.

The emperor made land grants to every soldier, aggregating 150 square miles, which down to these modern days has constituted the Free Republic of Andorra, under the sovereignty of France. The dispute is over one of these land titles, and it has been the subject of litigation for longer than 1,000 years.

The money expended in costs through successive trials is said to amount to more than ten times the value of the land itself.

Illinois Farmer Saves Girl From Enraged Wolf

Wilmington, Ill.—Farmers of this township staged a hunt in the hope of capturing a pair of wolves that have been plundering poultry yards. William Steen, a farmer of this vicinity, hastened to the rescue of Miss Celia Salton when she was attacked by a wolf. Miss Salton happened to notice a cub wallowing in the newly plowed field and thinking it was a dog picked it up. The mother of the cub, which had been hovering near unobserved, made a rush for Miss Salton and she might have been severely bitten but for Steen, who seized a club and beat off the enraged animal. Steen did not have a gun with him and the wolf then made its escape.

HIPPOTAMUS AND ANT

A little ant crawled along one of the bars of the enormous cage that belonged to the hippopotamus.

The hippopotamus lived in the zoo where he had an indoor room, a large bath and one outside yard.

"What is that?" asked Mr. Hippopotamus.

"Is it a moving speck?"

"What can it be? It doesn't seem to fly and therefore it cannot be a fly. I've seen flies before."

"That's fine," said the Rhinoceros from his zoo home nearby.

"That's wonderful to be able to say that you have seen flies. Mercy! That's better than though you could say that you had been around the world and had seen great sights. Mountains, waterfalls, rivers, lakes and the ocean are sights not to be thought of when a creature has been able to see flies."

Mr. Rhinoceros laughed as though he thought he had been very funny.

But Mr. Hippopotamus shook his enormous head.

"Mr. Rhinoceros, you have been very stupid."

"I did not say I had seen flies in a boastful fashion as if I had seen something very fine. I said it in the most ordinary tone of a hippo's voice."

Mr. Rhinoceros pretended he did not hear. He knew he had quite misunderstood the hippopotamus.

"Would you like to know what I am?" asked the Ant.

"I would indeed," said the Hippopotamus.

"I am an ant, a little insect."

"I crawl about and make ant hills where the ants live. I work hard, I carry things on my back."

"Where is your back?" asked the Hippopotamus.

"I don't dare come too near," said the Ant. "You might swallow me in a half-second, or step on me without even noticing. You are so big and I am so tiny.

"Poor Little Ant," Said Mr. Hippopotamus.

"But my back is where most creatures' backs are kept—at the back of themselves."

"I don't see how you can carry anything on your back," said Mr. Hippopotamus.

"How is it you're in the zoo?"

"Oh, I just came as a visitor. I'm not invited to stay and no one especially wants to see me."

"Poor little Ant," said Mr. Hippopotamus.

"How sorry I feel for you. Dear me, I was born in the zoo. My relatives come from far, far away in East Africa. I don't suppose you could crawl there if you took a hundred years about it, though of course I don't know."

"But I do feel sorry for you as people don't evidently want to look at you with interest if you don't belong here."

"I will take a bath, little Ant, and drown my tears of sorrow."

And the big Hippopotamus splashed in his bath and frightened the Ant away, but no one saw him shed any tears.

Instead, he hung to himself in this fashion:

"I'm good old Hippo,
I'm good old Hippo,
I'm good old Hippo-potamus.
I'm good old Hippo,
I'm good old Hippo,
I seldom make a fuss.
I'm good old Hippo,
I'm good old Hippo-potamus.
I'm good old Hippo,
I'm good old Hippo,
I couldn't ride on a bus.
I am so fat,
I am so fat,
I am so fat, you know,
I'd take a whole seat,
And a seat is meant for two! Oh—
I'm good old Hippopotamus,
I am, I am, I am.
Splash, splash, splash!
Isn't my song a swing,
And hasn't my song a dash?
Splash, splash, it's my own fat song."

A Diplomatic Blunder

Uncle Jim—Well, Tommy, did you make any mistakes at school today?
Nephew—Yes; I did a sum right that Mickey Mulligan had failed on.
Uncle Jim—But that wasn't a mistake.

Nephew—Sure it was. After school he licked me for doin' it.

Uncertain

Mrs. Grabber—Captain, is this ship going up or down?
Captain—Well, she's a leaky old tub, so I wouldn't be surprised if she'd go down, but her boilers ain't none too good, so she might go up—Roy's Life.

To Make Distant Reception Easy

How Single Circuit Receiver May Be Converted Into Efficient Set

Here are diagrams of a radio set for which the designer, a New Brunswick man, claims a remarkable record for distant reception. The diagram shows how to convert a single-circuit receiver, with only two changes, into a very efficient set.

Drawing No. 1 is the single-circuit receiver with the two changes shown by dotted lines. First connect a wire direct from the aerial binding post to start off the vario-coupler (opposite the end which goes to the grid), then disconnect lead from aerial to condenser, and connect rotor plates of the condenser to the ground binding post. Drawing of set connected this way is shown in Fig. 2.

Tap switch can be set anywhere from 8 to 25 turns from aerial, a .0005 or .00025 condenser may be used. Tuning is very sharp, gives more volume than the single circuit receiver, is selective, and distance is more than doubled.

With one stage audio, the designer heard such stations as: PW, Havana,

Fig. 2.

Cuba; 6KW, Tucuman, Cuba, (2,000 miles); WFAA, Dallas, Texas, 2,200 miles; WSB, Atlanta, Ga., 1,400 miles; KFI, Los Angeles, Cal., 3,000 miles; CFCA, Toronto, Ont.; WOS, Jefferson City, Mo.; WOC, Davenport, Iowa; WOAL, San Antonio, Texas; WOAW, Omaha, Neb.; KFLZ, Atlantic, Iowa; KFKJ, Bristow, Okla., and over a hundred other stations; all these stations come in regular. KFI came in every cold night in February and March.

When Your Headphones Should Have Attention

Headphones that have been in service for a year or more should be inspected by removing the cap and diaphragm. The mounting screws holding the horseshoe magnet in place should be tightened. Remove any dirt or particles of steel that may be collecting on pole pieces. The diaphragm should be inspected to ascertain if it has become bent and if so, it should be replaced with a new one. The screws holding the telephone cord tips should be tightened, but not removed, and reversed, as this will disturb the polarity of the unit, affecting signals. If the diaphragm has become weakened and touches the pole pieces it should be turned over on its reverse side, which will correct the trouble.

Care in Placing Holes in Composition Panels

All holes in composition panels should be large enough so that the screws fit loosely to prevent binding. Sometimes after holes are drilled in a panel and the instruments are ready to be assembled, the panel cracks when tightening up the screws. Baseboards also are often split by the screws used to hold the various instruments in place. This is particularly likely to happen if there are several screws near together which are in line with the same grain in the wood. Avoid this by scattering the screws as much as possible.

Radio Hints That Will Be of Interest to Fans

Switches on a set should be kept clean.

Whenever possible, run the aerial over a vacant lot.

Output from every tube goes from plate and filament.

Copper aerial wires will sag considerably in warm weather.

A crystal detector cannot be used in a regenerative hookup.

The plate voltage is too high when a soft bluish glow appears in the tubes.

A piece of emery cloth tied in the rubber end of a lead pencil makes a good socket-prong cleaner.

One of the great causes of interference is the misuse of regenerative receivers.

Community Building

Home Owner Always Makes Good Citizen

Home ownership is a big factor in the making of a good citizen. A man who owns his own home, or has started to pay for one, is a much more stable and dependable person than the one who rents his living quarters, because he feels himself a member of the community, writes Allene Lyle in the Chicago Evening Post. He expects to make it his permanent home and he is interested in improving it. The man who lives in a rented house or apartment can always move on short notice if there is something in the community which is not to his liking, and he is quite apt to do so, but the man who lives in a house which he owns himself is much more apt to try to bring the community up to his standards and ideals.

A home owner feels that he belongs to the community and it belongs to him. He pays taxes and he is concerned about how this public money is spent. He wants good streets and highways; he is interested in transportation facilities, lighting and improvements in sanitation; he demands good laws and their enforcement for the protection of his property and his family. He is vitally concerned in his community's schools and churches.

Overlook Chances to Redeem Blighted Spots

While they are centering their attention on the conservation, protection and improvement of Illinois' beauty spots nature lovers and others interested in the state's natural beauty should not lose sight of the many blighted spots that have almost unlimited possibilities for improvement, in the opinion of Karl B. Lohmann, in charge of landscape gardening at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

Many of the farm building groups in the state, hundreds of school grounds and miles of so-called improved roads unfortunately come within this class of blighted features, he said.

"Despite the luxurious acreage which they command," he explained, "thousands of farm building groups in Illinois are desolate because they are not in good order, they are not arranged efficiently for maximum convenience, they are not compactly and well disposed about agreeably shaped and effectively paved courts and they lose the picturesqueness that is possible with suitably placed trees, shrubs and lawns, hedges and fences."

"Stretches of grass should front the school structures and trees should be introduced."

Thought Comes Too Late

Formal and official city planning is comparatively a new art in this country. Most American cities have been allowed to grow in a haphazard way, and the way is usually to their disadvantage in attractiveness and convenience. It is only after they are well established that residents usually begin to think of the future development and to regret earlier mistakes. To correct all the unwise features and to remove or reconstruct obstructive and ugly buildings is too costly an undertaking, and for the most part the planning that can then be done looks to the suburban growth and to public and business structures that, as time and progress go on, are necessary to replace old ones.

Plant Flowers

"The tenant who has flowers growing in his front yard is the future home owner," observes O. H. Funston, first president of the Richmond (Pa.) Real Estate exchange. Esthetic decoration of the home, and the deep-rooted instinct to merge the house with its surroundings through the planting of shrubbery probably date back to the nicely trained vines near the opening of the first cave, the National Association of Real Estate Boards suggests. Wasn't it the vine and the fig tree that announced to the primitive world in general, "This abode belongs to someone?"

Importance of Prosperity

There is nothing of more importance to any of us than the prosperity of our own town and community, so let's get together and work to that end. The more prosperous the town or community is as a whole the more prosperous will be each individual. And the only way any community can be really prosperous is by a co-operation on the part of all in making it so. We can never expect to amount to much if we persist in the idea of "going it alone." Let's work together.—Marion County (Ala.) News.

Economy in Building

The actual value of the house, its upkeep, and the health and comfort of the family, are to a very large extent dependent on the character and quality of its heating, lighting, plumbing, and mechanical equipment. Home builders are advised not to select poor equipment because it seems cheap. True economy lies first in careful planning, second in buying good materials as cheaply as possible, and third in seeing that the equipment is properly installed.—Indianapolis Star.

FEEDING BABY DURING SUMMER

Milk is recognized as the ideal food for young children. It should be carefully guarded during the warm summer months, to insure its freedom from germs or bacteria that might cause harm to the child. Because of its nature, it is, under certain conditions, a breeding and propagating ground for germ life and may soon become unfit for use unless it is handled with the utmost care and vigilance. Perhaps the ideal way to obviate this risk is through the use of evaporated milk. This milk is only pure milk with sixty per cent of the water removed from it and is absolutely sterile. It is of double richness but may be modified by the addition of water, which will return it to its original volume with a greatly enhanced food value.

Evaporated milk is sterilized and has a high nutritive content. This causes it to be a very excellent food for the young child and the infant. In fact, many of the leading pediatricians of the country advocate its use after the child is deprived of its mother's milk. A formula, evolved by these pediatricians, through experimentation, is as follows:

From Sixth Week to Third Month.
Milk, evaporated ..... 8 ounces
Lime water ..... 3 ounces
Milk sugar ..... 3 ounces
Bottled water ..... 26 ounces
Seven feedings in twenty-four hours; 4 to 5 ounces at three-hour intervals during the day and four-hour intervals at night.

From Third Month to Fifth Month.
Milk, evaporated ..... 7 1/2 ounces
Lime water ..... 3 ounces
Milk sugar ..... 3 ounces
Bottled water ..... 29 1/2 ounces
Six feedings in twenty-four hours; 5 to 6 ounces at three-hour intervals during the day and a feeding at 10 p. m.

From Fifth to Seventh Month.
Milk, evaporated ..... 10 ounces
Lime water ..... 3 ounces
Milk sugar ..... 3 ounces
Bottled water ..... 29 ounces
Five feedings in twenty-four hours; 6 to 7 ounces at four-hour intervals, the last feeding to be given at 10 p. m.

From Seventh to Ninth Month.
Milk, evaporated ..... 11 ounces
Lime water ..... 3 ounces
Milk sugar ..... 3 ounces
Bottled water ..... 35 ounces
7 to 9 ounces at four-hour intervals during the day. Last feeding at ten at night.

From Ninth to Twelfth Month.
Milk, evaporated ..... 12 ounces
Lime water ..... 3 ounces
Milk sugar ..... 3 ounces
Bottled water ..... 34 ounces
8 to 9 ounces at four-hour intervals during day. Last feeding at ten at night.

SCARLET FEVER ON THE RUN

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

SCARLET FEVER is about to join the ever-increasing list of preventable diseases. For centuries this disease has been one of the most dangerous enemies of child life. Scarlet fever kills, every year in this country, about 15,000 children, mostly under ten years old.

Knowledge regarding this disease has grown slowly. For many centuries, it was considered the same as measles. All efforts to find the cause have been fruitless until recently. It was known to be highly contagious, though how the infection was conveyed from the sick to the well child was not known.

Treatment is of little value. Osler, the great authority on medicine, wrote twenty-five years ago: "The disease cannot be cut short. In the presence of the severer forms we are helpless." Not only has the disease itself a high mortality rate but even in those who recover, serious trouble with the kidneys and heart often follows, leaving the child crippled for life, with a chronic Bright's disease or a badly disabled heart.

Like all germ diseases, little could be done, either to prevent or cure the disease, until its cause was discovered. For over twenty years, it has been suspected that the streptococcus, a germ which grows in chains or wreaths, had something to do with scarlet fever. But there are as many kinds of streptococcus as there are varieties of apples. Which one of these little plants causes scarlet fever?

Fifteen years ago, when the child of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick of Chicago died of scarlet fever, his parents learned that there was no treatment for this disease and that little was known about it. In his memory they established the McCormick Institute for Contagious Diseases, in which, for over ten years, the best men in medical science have been seeking the cause of scarlet fever.

Here Dr. George Frederick Dick and his wife, Dr. Gladys Henry Dick, found the cause to be the hemolytic streptococcus, a germ which disintegrates the blood. They have made an antitoxin which protects the well child against scarlet fever and which checks the disease itself, if given early enough. Scarlet fever is on the run. Soon it will cease to be the terror it has been for ages.

BASEBALL SQUIDS

It is possible to enjoy baseball by radio, but fishing is different.

Phil Bedgood, big right-handed pitcher, has been unconditionally released by the Cleveland Indians.

Jimmy Ring of the Phillies was the "wild man" of the National league last season, walking 108 batters.

Dickie Kerr, former Chicago White Sox pitcher, will play with the South Bend semi-professionals this year.

Outfielder Bill Cunningham has been released by the Boston Braves to Sacramento of the Pacific Coast league.

A man in Evansville named his horse "White Sox" because it had four white feet and a star on its forehead.

Charley Hollocher, slick shortstop of the Chicago Cubs, does not yet feel able to take up active baseball playing.

Nig Clarke, oldest player in the game in point of actual service, has been signed by Tulsa of the Western league.

Jimmy McAuley is a turn-around hitter. Therefore, the Bears have only two regular left hand batters—Heathcote and Grimm.

Dubuque of the Mississippi Valley league, has signed Claude Wilham, a youngster from Sumner, Iowa, as a first-base candidate.

Louisville has sent Jack Walsh, former college catcher, to Chattanooga of the Southern league, on option. Experience is all he needs.

Arnold Stutz has been pounding the ball fairly well of late. One reason for this is the fact that he is not trying to hit to right field.

Elmer Smith, utility outfielder of the Cincinnati Reds, set a record recently when he hit two home runs in one inning while serving as pinch hitter.

Harrisburg of the New York-Pennsylvania league has secured John Levi, Haskell college football star of last year, from the New York Americans under option.

Rooters, the baseball variety, have formed a New York organization, and will band together to aid the Giants and Yankees to victory this summer. Colors have not been selected.

Miss Ellen Anderson of Chicago, formerly of Point Loma, is renewing old acquaintances on a short vacation trip.

LOVE AND SACRIFICE

IF YOU exhibit a continuous willingness to love and sacrifice when all humans about you seem resentful and unappreciative, you have within your soul the essence of true nobility.

In wars between nations, in domestic turmoils, in the breaking of home ties, in the struggles for existence, love and sacrifice ultimately become the final arbiters.

What more beautiful than the love and sacrifice of a mother, who regards her children with loving and snubs of her children keeps on loving and making sacrifices for their comfort and advancement, still smiling complacently while in her breast she is carrying a burden causing aches and pains from which she would gladly be relieved, but refuses to be, because of her spiritual nobility and simple faith.

The world is full of such love and sacrifice, perhaps saving it and its peoples from divine wrath, but certainly making it better in manifold ways which we do not in our blindness and apathy perceive or consider.

When all men say "impossible," when the waters are snarling and the storms are beating against a wanton boy or girl, love and sacrifice stoop down and rescue him or her from peril.

WHO SAID

"Methods are the master of masters"

THE man who uttered these words owed his success in life to his methodical way of doing things.

Charles Maurice de Talleyrand-Perigord—better known as Talleyrand—was a man of methods and a man who so thoroughly studied the problems that presented themselves before him for solution that he became one of the leading statesmen in the France of his day. He was born in Paris, February 13, 1754, and died there May 17, 1838.

In the year 1792 Talleyrand was sent to London on a diplomatic mission. While there his enemies at home brought charges against him of being involved in royalist intrigues and he was proscribed. In 1794—he had remained in England because of the proscription awaiting him in France—England passed the famous alien act and Talleyrand was forced to seek asylum in America. After two years spent in the new republic, Talleyrand returned to France.

On his return to his native land he was appointed minister of foreign affairs, but being suspected of being in communication with the agents of Louis XVIII he was forced to resign in 1799.

Talleyrand was one of the first to recognize in Napoleon Bonaparte one of the great leaders of the time, and from this time forward for some years he devoted himself unflinchingly to the service of the "Little Corporal."

In 1807, following the peace of Tilsit, a coolness arose between Talleyrand and the emperor and in the following year Talleyrand secretly joined a royalist committee. The year 1814 saw him active in procuring the abdication of Napoleon and working to place Louis XVIII again on the throne. After holding numerous positions un-

Your Last Name

IS IT BYRD?

BYRD differs not at all from Bird in the matter of derivation and the matter is usually settled by saying that the name is from the commonly accepted meaning of bird, and was probably first used as a surname as a nickname. The original bearers of the name, in other words, doubtless possessed some birdlike qualities that made the name seem appropriate. But there really seems to be more to it than this. In early times, byrd or bird meant only a young bird, while fowl was the word used for birds in general. In the Bible fowl is used in this way, as "the fowls of the air." Later for a time bird was used to indicate the young of other living things and sometimes meant children.

In this country the name Byrd has especial significance because it was borne by the founder of Richmond, Va. This was William Byrd who was born in western Virginia in 1674. His father was William Byrd, the colonist, who had come to Virginia a few months before the birth of his son and namesake.

William Byrd, second, was a man of great benevolence and showed the greatest kindness to the colonists who settled on his land. At one time he received 300 destitute French Huguenots on his place and made it possible for them to establish themselves in their new home. William Byrd was a man of literary taste and had a library of 3,500 volumes, which was the largest library at the time in the colonies. William Byrd's wife was a daughter of Col. Dan Parke, an aide de camp of Marlborough at Blenheim,

There is no depth to which love and sacrifice will not descend; no height to which they will not scale to accomplish their object.

We may turn in lofty disdain from the little old woman with dimmed eyes, gnarled fingers and a limp in her walk, but if we could look into her heart and see its every recess the symbol of love and sacrifice, we might realize that we have snubbed an angel.

Every first of January we open a new book with high resolves.

On the first page there are profuse promises of love and sacrifice, then follow a few blushing leaves containing hasty scrawls; with the rest of the volume a blank.

We forget our vows ere January is done, just as we forget to pay homage to the little old woman with the dimmed eyes and gnarled fingers, who never fails from the beginning of the year to the end to remember love and sacrifice, when she may be counted upon faithfully to do until the end of her days.

HOW IT WAS DECIDED

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

DAD meant him for a merchant, and his brother for a bank; Sister thought that acting was the very thing for Hank. Grandma thought that preaching was the thing he should be at. And all the while insisted that she meant the boy for that.

Mother—well, a lawyer mother meant her boy to be.

Granddad was a sailor, so he meant him for the sea.

Some pulled for the ocean, some pulled for the shore—

There were so many matters that so many meant him for.

Now, of all his mentors only one, of course, could win.

Maybe you may wonder whom he followed of his kin? Well, he met a maiden, as will frequently occur.

And the maid at once decided that the boy was meant for her.

Among the NOTABLES

NICHOLAS BIDDLE

NICHOLAS BIDDLE was born September 10, 1750, with a taste for adventure. So when he was fourteen, he ran away from his home in Philadelphia, where he was born, and, as the expression goes, "went to sea." He soon got plenty of adventure. He sailed to Quebec, then to the West Indies, where the ship was wrecked, and those of the crew who survived, were cast ashore on a desert island. As there was only one small life boat, they cast lots to see who should stay and drown or who should leave the ship. After some two months, the men were rescued and Biddle's wealthy family secured him an appointment in the British navy. He was twenty, then, and as he was considered too young to be allowed to accompany Misgrave on an arctic cruise, he deserted and shipped with the explorer as a common seaman, and went. Nelson, later to become the world famous admiral, was his messmate.

When the War of Independence broke out, Biddle came home to enlist and showed such ability that he was given charge of ships that went out and captured enemy vessels, bringing supplies for their troops. He was the naval hero of the country. Then one day he got into a fight with an enemy ship and was wounded. Ignoring his hurt, he ordered an armchair and, supported on it, continued to direct the battle. His ship blew up and he perished along with the whole crew, a mere lad of twenty-seven. Yet he had accomplished more than most old men, during his brief lifetime.

SUMMER DRINKS

DURING the warm weather cool, sparkling drinks are always welcome.

Grape Granito.

Put a pound of sugar into a pint of water, boil for five minutes. Take from the fire, add the juice of a lemon and an orange. When cool add a pint of grape juice and shaved ice to chill.

Indiana Punch.

Boil a pound of sugar, a quart of water and the grated rind of a lemon for five minutes; strain, add a teaspoonful of bitteralmond extract, the juice of three lemons, a teaspoonful of vanilla and two cupsful of strong tea. When very cold add ice and a pint of effervescent water.

Notable Cases Where Skill Beats Strength

There are many examples in natural history of skill overcoming sheer brute strength, and there is one illustration of educated animal instinct which comes very near to human skill.

This is the collie dog, which, by hereditary and acquired skill, is capable not only of controlling the movements of flocks of sheep and herds of cattle which, as regards brute strength, are infinitely superior to itself, but is further able to count the herd or flock and discover if one is missing from it.

Cases are on record in which collies, missing one out of a flock of sheep, have gone back and either hunted it up or found it dead. This is certainly the nearest approach to human skill exhibited in the animal kingdom.

In the jungles of India there are monkeys who are able by means of something like human skill to take hold of snakes which could easily kill or crush them, in such a fashion that the reptiles cannot strike with their fangs. The monkeys then hit the snakes' heads against stones or trees until they are dead or stunned.

A still more curious fact is that the monkeys only do this when they know they are within reach of a herb which frequently proves an antidote to the bite of the particular snake they attack.

Of marine animals the whale is physically the most powerful. Its most determined enemy is the thrasher, a fish of much inferior strength, which, by superior skill in attack, frequently comes off victor. There is also a kind of shark which arranges its attacks so skillfully that it will wound to death a whale which could kill it with a single stroke of its flukes.

Filling Zuyder Zee

When the draining of the Zuyder zee has been completed 30 or more years hence about 494,000 acres of fertile land will have been reclaimed—enough to take care of 250,000 Hollanders who otherwise would be forced to emigrate by the steadily increasing overpopulation of the Netherlands. What will become of the 3,000 fishermen who now earn their living by fishing is another question. The government has taken far-reaching measures to compensate the fishermen or to aid them by shifting the scene of their activity to the coast. Moreover a small lake will be left in the center of the present sea so that fishing will not be permitted to die by inches. The greater number of the Zuyder zee fishermen will be trained in inland navigation. Recently the first training ship left Amsterdam for a trip along the Dutch rivers in order to prepare the fishermen for their new jobs. Within a few weeks several of those on the isle of Marken will go up for examination. Several other fishermen already have become "landlubbers." One may see them road mending in their picturesque fishermen's dresses.

Making Windmills Work

Rigid tests are being applied to the invention of a Berlin scientist, Major Bilau, who has erected on a farm in Hertfordshire a windmill which he claims will develop enough electric power to light a village and can easily supply sufficient power to operate all the machinery on a large farm or ranch. It is a curious looking windmill, having great arms shaped much like the blades of an airplane propeller, and so constructed that suction is brought into play to get every ounce of turning power from the wind. As the propellers revolve they put in motion a set of gears that drive a dynamo contained in a balloonlike attachment immediately behind them. Near by four other windmills of various types are operating and the power they develop is registered in a testing shed and compared daily with the work done by a Bilau mill.

Frankness Rewarded

The debate between Bishop Welldon and the Durham signalman as to the "selfishness" of the railwaymen's demand for higher wages ended in the proper English fashion, "with loud applause for the two protagonists." It is pleasant to find that so much fair play is possible in the heated atmosphere of 1925. It was in 1865 that John Stuart Mill, standing for Westminster, was asked by a heckler whether it was true that he had said the working classes were generally liars. "I did," he replied, exciting, says a biographer, "vehement applause," and he was triumphantly returned.—London Observer.

Temperatures on Mars

During the past year investigations to determine, as nearly as possible, the temperatures on the planet Mars were conducted both at the Mount Wilson observatory in California and at the observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz. The observers at Mount Wilson calculated the afternoon temperatures along the equator of Mars to be approximately 10 degrees above freezing, while those at Flagstaff estimate the temperature at 20 above freezing. These calculations would indicate that Mars would be more temperate as a summer than a winter resort. In the Martian polar regions the temperature must be extremely low.

Genius and the Brain

That genius may have its abode in a brain much below the average in weight is proved by the case of the late Anatole France. Doctor Regault, to whom the brain was submitted, states that it weighed only 1,017 grammes, or nearly 400 grammes below the accepted figure.

MANY METHODS OF SIGNALING

Early Inventions for "Long-Distance" Talk.

The fabulous honor of being the first inventor of the art of signaling, says the Scientific American, is bestowed by certain classical writers upon the ingenious Palamedes, but it is certain that long before the time of the Trojan war the Egyptians and Assyrians, if not the Chinese and other nations of remote antiquity—of whom monumental records alone remain to us—had developed regular methods of signaling by fire, smoke, flags, and so on. Signals were passed from tower to tower of the Great Wall of China, and the Tower of Babel was a signal tower.

Beacons are "as old as the hills" on whose summits they were placed. Those lighted on Mounts Ida, Athos, Citheron and intervening heights conveyed information of the taking of Troy by Agamemnon. Leander was guided across the Hellespont by the signal lamp displayed by Hero in her tower at Sestos. One night the lamp was blown out—he was drowned, and she then threw herself into the waves. Theseus, in the Argonautic expedition, conveyed information by colors of the sails hoisted, but killed his father through a telegraphic error; for, flushed with victory, he forgot his signal, and old Aegeus, seeing the black sail, and feeling sure his son was dead, flung himself into the sea.

The use of mirrors to flash signals by the sun's rays dates back to the time of the pharaohs. The Persians are said to have considerably developed it for purposes of war.

The Persians, the Gauls and the Aztecs communicated by relays of sentinels shouting to one another, and Alexander, by means of the stentoraphonic tube, tactical Armos communicated at night by means of a tall vessel containing water, which was let out slowly by a tap at the bottom; on the water floated a cork disk carrying a gauge with divisions down the side, and on each division a separate sentence was inscribed. Each signaling point had one of these contrivances; and on a light being shown from one station it was acknowledged by the other, and each clepsydra opened at the moment. When the surface of the water receded to the sentence required, the signaling station again showed a light, when the other stopped the outflow and read the words inscribed at the water level upon the corresponding gauge.

Hannibal erected watch towers in Africa and Spain to signal from; and whenever the Romans extended their conquests in Gaul, Spain or elsewhere, they made use of similar signaling devices. A representation of one of their telegraph towers is engraved on Trojan's column, and ruins of some of them are still to be seen in parts of France.

Don't Talk—Telegraph

A traveling man went into a railway restaurant and gazed discontentedly at the profusion of pies and cakes on the counter. "Haven't you got anything solid to eat?" he asked.

"Shall I give you some beans?" asked the proprietor, with his most persuasive smile. The traveler assented and, making short work of them, asked: "How much?"

"Twenty-five cents," was the bland response.

"What!" cried the drummer; "25 cents for a spoonful of cold beans?" The proprietor continued firm in his price, the man paid it and departed. But late that afternoon a telegram was handed in to the restaurant keeper, for which he paid 25 cents.

It ran thus: "Don't you think your price a little high on beans?"—American Mutual Magazine.

Alexandra

Alexandra, queen of Judea, the widow and successor of Alexander Jannaeus, was a wise and virtuous princess, who, contrary to example of her husband, studied to please her subjects and preserved peace and prosperity during her reign of seven years.

She died in the seventy-third year of her age, B. C. 70. She was the mother of Hyrcanus and Aristobulus and the latter years of her reign were disturbed by the attempt of her younger son, Aristobulus, to obtain the sovereignty, as he was exasperated by the favor his mother showed to the sect of the Pharisees and the authority she allowed them.—Chicago Journal.

Double-Decked Airship

Two separate decks and accommodations for 100 passengers are features promised in a giant airship of stainless-steel framework that is planned for traffic between England and India. Its motors are to use a heavy gas oil, eliminating the fire hazard to such an extent that passengers will be permitted to smoke during the voyage. A smoking room is included in the plans. The ship will be 720 feet long, 140 feet in diameter and will contain two-bed sleeping cabins.

Small Elizabeth was visiting on her grandfather's farm. As she walked hand in hand with her grandfather toward the barn, she heard a hen clucking loudly. "What's that?" she inquired.

"A hen," replied her grandfather. "She's laid an egg and she's proud of it."

Elizabeth looked up in astonishment. "Proud of it?" she exclaimed. "With eggs as cheap as they are now!"

EXOTIC STYLES IN NEGLIGEEES; OUTFITTING THE YOUNGER SET

IN THE realm of colorful and daring fabrics and exotic styles negligees are pioneers, for women have always allowed themselves freedom of choice in these within-doors garments. A little journey in the shops reveals greater extremes than ever in brilliance of colors, variety of styles and fabrics—and sources of inspiration in design. The boldest and most splendid patterns in printed silks have been appropriated for negligees and it takes a second look sometimes to determine whether a gorgeous garment is a negligee or an opera coat.

In nearly all negligees of printed silk—whatever the style—it is noteworthy that a plain silk is used in and also in silk-and-cotton mixtures. It is glorious midsummer, vacations are here and all the younger generation asks is to be let alone, to do as it pleases for a while. After months spent in school it pleases to explore the big outdoors, in a kindly world full of waters and woods and inexhaustible fascinations. In the country parents have only to get their youngsters into sturdy clothes, provide a substantial lunch, and turn them loose—under the eye of some one who will steer them homeward toward nightfall. City dwellers are looking up summer camps where younger city dwellers may sojourn, as every child is entitled to, in the country. These combination. In the Chinese suits with trousers and jacket, the trousers are of plain silk or satin and the jacket of figured silk bordered with the plain silk. In coat-like types figured and plain silks are used in equal proportions, in garments much more effective than they could be without the introduction of the plain color. Just at present brilliant figured silks combined with black silk are favored.

The pretty and conservative negligee shown here—of plain and figured summer camps for boys and girls are growing in popularity all the time—they do wonders for the young people and at the same time provide a respite from responsibility for parents who may want to do a little vacationing on their own account.

Equipping the young girl for a real summer outing, whether in a girl's camp or for a visit in the country, is a fairly simple matter. She will wear knickers and blouses, substantial shoes and stockings, a soft hat of felt or fabric or straw, and the simplest of underwear. Her knickers are usually made of very heavy cotton or strong linen fabrics or they may be of tweed or homespun. Blouses of flannel or silk—will appeal to the home dress-maker because of its simple styling. A short kimono lengthened by a skirt, gathered and set on with a piping, presents no difficulties even to the beginner in home sewing. Bias bands of figured silk provide a border and band trimming in the skirt, while sleeves and collar are finished with bands of plain silk. The ties at the side might be either of ribbon or of the plain silk. The model suggests a fine way to use two out-of-style frocks converted into a negligee like that pictured, and be good for much service and pleasure. Other fabrics than silk are adapted to this negligee—it would be very pretty in challie printed crepe

APPLE BUTTER IS EASILY MADE AT HOME

Making Apple Butter on a Virginia Mountain Farm.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Apple butter is a simple, old-fashioned spiced preserve which is easily made at home. It affords an excellent means of using up surplus apples, or the sound parts of windfall, wormy, or bruised apples, either in small or large quantities. The most satisfactory apples for the purpose are those which have a distinctively rich, tart, flavor, and good cooking quality, such as Northern Spy, Rhode Island Greening, Tompkins King, and Smokehouse. Summer apples have been found by the United States Department of Agriculture to give as rich and "snappy" a butter as the fall and winter varieties.

There are two ways of making apple butter—either with or without sweet cider. The old idea was that the cider must be boiled down at least one-half before the apples were added, but this has been found unnecessary. Just as good results can be obtained by adding the apples to the uncooked cider and boiling rapidly till finished. Small lots may be made in an hour or less. Large quantities take longer, but may be cooked as rapidly as possible. The butter must be watched carefully and stirred frequently to prevent scorching and sticking to the kettle. An enameled or aluminum preserving kettle especially kept for cooking fruit is desirable, though not absolutely necessary. The large iron and copper kettles used on farms in the past for making apple butter out of doors are still in use in many sections of the country.

Apple Butter With Cider.

In making apple butter with cider, the usual proportion is gallon for gallon, but from one-half to three-quarters of a gallon of cider to a gallon of peeled and sliced apples will give a rich product if the apples are good cookers. Less than half as much cider as apples is likely to make an apple sauce rather than a butter. The cooking is continued until the cider and apples do not separate and the butter, when cold, is as thick as apple sauce. About a pound of either white or brown sugar to a gallon of butter is the usual proportion, added when the cooking is about two-thirds done. More or less or not any sugar may be used, to suit the taste.

Spicing is also a matter of taste. A good flavor will be obtained by adding half a teaspoonful each of ground cinnamon, cloves, and allspice for each gallon of butter, when the cooking is finished. From two to four teaspoonfuls of vanilla extract per gallon improves the quality and adds to the "snappiness" of the butter.

Apple Butter Without Cider.

Add apples of good quality are best. Enough water is added to the peeled and sliced apples to make a thin apple sauce, which is then cooked very slowly over a low fire for three or four hours. The butter must be stirred often. Brown, rather than white sugar, is added when the cooking is two-thirds done. A pound of sugar to a gallon of apple butter is the usual proportion, and the same amounts of cinnamon, allspice, cloves and vanilla mentioned in the last paragraph may be added when the butter is taken from the fire.

It is possible to keep apple butter in containers without air-tight covers, by pouring melted paraffin on top, but it is wise to use jars with tight-fitting covers and sterilize them in a hot-water bath for fifteen minutes.

CLUB GIRL LEADS A CANNING SCHOOL

Boys and Girls Taught How to Demonstrate.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Conducting a canning school for a month or six weeks in a large grocery store in Boise, is the experience of a Canyon county (Idaho) canning club girl, namely, Miss Theresa Lenaghen. A representative of a large glass manufacturing company desiring to establish a canning school in Boise, looked about for an experienced person to conduct this school. Knowing of the work of farm bureau junior canning clubs and being interested in this work, the representative secured the names of several members of canning teams and from these chose the name of Miss Lenaghen, who consented to take charge of the work.

Miss Lenaghen has been a member of canning teams since 1917, being a member of the Canyon county champion team for two years and was also captain of the state champion canning team of 1918, which went to Spokane and won second place in the interstate canning demonstration contest. Garbed in an appropriate white uniform and cap, Miss Lenaghen is busy from 9 to 12 o'clock in the morning and from 1:30 to 4:30 afternoons.

All members of the boys' and girls' clubs organized by the United States Department of Agriculture and the state colleges are taught how to demonstrate what they have learned, for their leaders regard it to be of as much importance to the boys and girls to be able to teach others well as it is to learn how to do it themselves.

BUDGETING IDEA IS GROWING RAPIDLY

Plan Being Applied in Spending Time and Money.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The budget idea is growing. Not alone in government and commercial organizations is the wisdom of the budget system of running business being more clearly shown each year. The twentieth century homemaker is also applying the budget plan to the spending of both time and money in her household, says the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. Only this can she be sure that ends will meet at the end of the year.

Here are the five important but not difficult steps for the homemaker in the scheduling of housework:

List all your regular daily activities, then all the regular tasks that do not come every day.

Estimate the usual time required for each of these regular tasks. If it is difficult to make such an estimate for some task, jot down the time required the next time you do it and use this as the basis of your estimate. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, will send a blank for such a time record to any homemaker requesting it.

From these lists, distribute the tasks that do not come every day to certain days of the week in such a way as to make the week run smoothly and to give the best possible arrangement of leisure time. For example, Monday may include the changing of bed linen, the collection of laundry, some marketing, and perhaps some of the cooking for the next two days; Tuesday, the washing; Wednesday, the ironing; Thursday, the mending, some marketing, and an "outing" or meeting; and Friday and Saturday, the cleaning and extra baking. Jobs which do not need to be done every week, as the washing of windows or special cleaning of pots and pans, can be scheduled for the same time, so that some of them can be attended to each week.

As the fourth step, list the jobs for each day in the order in which they are to be done, placing the time of starting and finishing before each item. This will require some juggling of items in order that such fixed ones as preparing and serving meals will come at the proper times. Many homemakers find it convenient to have the schedule for each day on a separate sheet or card with a hole punched in the top in order that it may be hung up in a conspicuous place before the day's work starts.

Simple Explanation of Jones' Little Blunder

His wife was a tall brunette. Jones had waited on the appointed corner for her for 15 minutes and was beginning to grow impatient. At last he espied a tall, familiar-looking figure coming down the street. She arrived at the corner, and he took her by the arm, saying: "Come, dear, we must hurry."

"Sir, how dare you?" the woman answered.

"Why, Hartie, what in the world—" "Officer, this masher is attempting to be familiar with me," the tall woman said to a John Law who had just approached.

On his way to the station Jones had an opportunity to think it over. Suddenly it dawned on him—he had forgotten to remove his colored glasses and had accosted a blonde instead of his dark-haired spouse.—Washington Columns.

Feel All Out of Sorts?

Is backache spoiling your summer? Do you get up lame and stiff—feel tired all day? Are you so nervous and worn out you cannot rest or relax? Look, then, to your kidneys! Sluggish kidneys allow poisons to accumulate and upset the whole system. When this happens you are apt to suffer backache, sharp pains, soreness, stiffness, dizziness and annoying kidney irregularities. Help your kidneys with a stimulant diuretic. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are used the world over. Ask your neighbor!

Watch Your Diet, Says Prima Donna

Cyrena Van Gordon, prima donna of the Chicago Opera company, believes in the flapper and her privileges. She believes in the practice of this much-discussed person in wearing no corsets, in wearing short skirts, going in for athletics and outdoor life and in thoroughly upsetting the theories and practices of her mother and grandmother. Miss Van Gordon, who is, in private life, Mrs. S. Bogart Munns, the wife of Doctor S. B. Munns, says that all of these things are woman's right and are necessary if a woman is anxious to keep her youth and beauty. But exercise is not the only thing that is necessary for the woman who is desirous of being attractive. She must watch her diet and be careful not to eat anything that will, in any way, be fattening.

There are certain dishes to which Miss Van Gordon is partial and to which she gives the credit for the retention of her beauty. These dishes, she prefers to prepare herself and, when on tour with the Chicago Opera company, she carries a small electric stove in order that she will not be deprived of the food she deems necessary. These dishes are easily prepared. Miss Van Gordon uses for

Latest Triumph in Railroading

THE completion of the new Chicago Union Station marks a noteworthy accomplishment in the history of important engineering undertakings, from which travelers from all parts of the United States will derive pleasure and benefit.

The station is without doubt one of the finest and most efficiently designed railroad terminals in the world. It forms a vital link in the realization of the "Chicago City Beautiful Plan." Simplicity, accessibility and convenience for the traveling public are the essential virtues of the new terminal. Rest and recreation rooms, ticket offices, ber shop, dining rooms, stores of various kinds, and almost every convenience known to travelers, are to be had on the one level, no steps to be he main station is a low monumental type of building with a row of five columns of classic design g the entire east front. Once in the traveler finds himself in a ntle waiting room more than 100 high and brilliantly lighted ugh skylights in the great arch. Colonnades inclose the room, walls of which are patterned after architecture of ancient Rome. Boring this room are the ultra-complete enger terminal facilities. An innon in railway terminal design is a erence room accommodating 125 e, which is available, without charge, to patrons of the Union Station lines for conferences and other meetings.

To give some idea of the immensity of the new station, it may be stated that the main building covers an area of about three acres with a concourse covering 60,000 square feet. The entire terminal facilities cover more than 35 acres and will expedite the prompt and satisfactory handling of 50,000 passengers, 400 tons of baggage and 300 trains daily with room for future expansion. Fifteen acres of glass were used in the various coverings over the train sheds, which extend more than 1,200 feet beyond the main structure. A total of 17,000 tons of structural steel, 175,000 cubic feet of Indiana limestone and 10,000 cubic feet of granite were used in the station building and concourse. The foundation consists of 449 cylindrical concrete piers from four to ten feet in diameter, reaching to a depth of more than 60 feet below the level of the Chicago river.

Those who have had the privilege of inspecting the new station pronounce it a marvel in terminal construction and are urging their friends to see it on their next visit to Chicago. The station is used jointly by the Pennsylvania Railroad; Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry.; Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R. R., and the Chicago & Alton R. R.
